

Romuald Jamet – Associate Professor, Centre UCS-Sciences sociales, Institut national de la recherche scientifique (INRS)

Romuald Jamet holds a doctorate in sociology and is associate professor of cultural economics and policy at INRS's Urbanisation-Culture-Société center.

After completing his doctoral training in Europe (University Paris-Cité/Humboldt Universitaet zu Berlin), he completed his postdoctoral studies at UCS on the digital transformations of cultural consumption and cultural industries.

Specialist of cultural discoverability, Romuald Jamet is primarily interested in the social, economic and political impacts of streaming on music production and consumption in Quebec.

Moreover, since the start of his PhD studies, he has been committed to improving the socio-professional conditions of young researchers.
